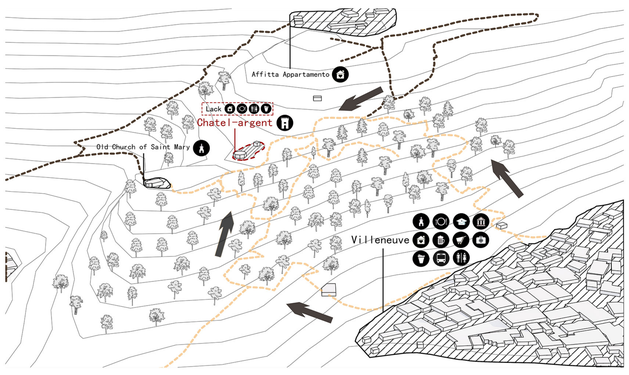
Theatre of History

1.Background

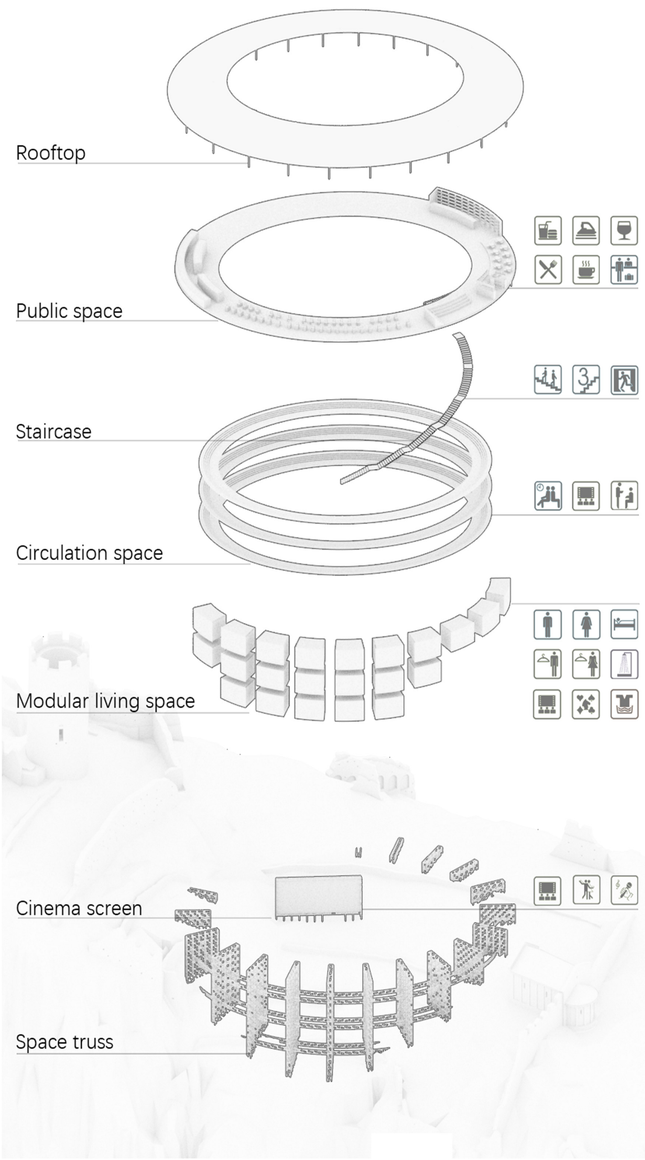
The Chatel-Argent Castle in Villeneuve has stood for countless ages, transforming from its original defensive purpose into ruins. Behind its broken facade lies a deep sense of history and the passage of time, as well as a silent witness to the village's development over the years. Today, the stones from which the castle takes its name still glisten in the sunlight, as if narrating that long history to every visitor.

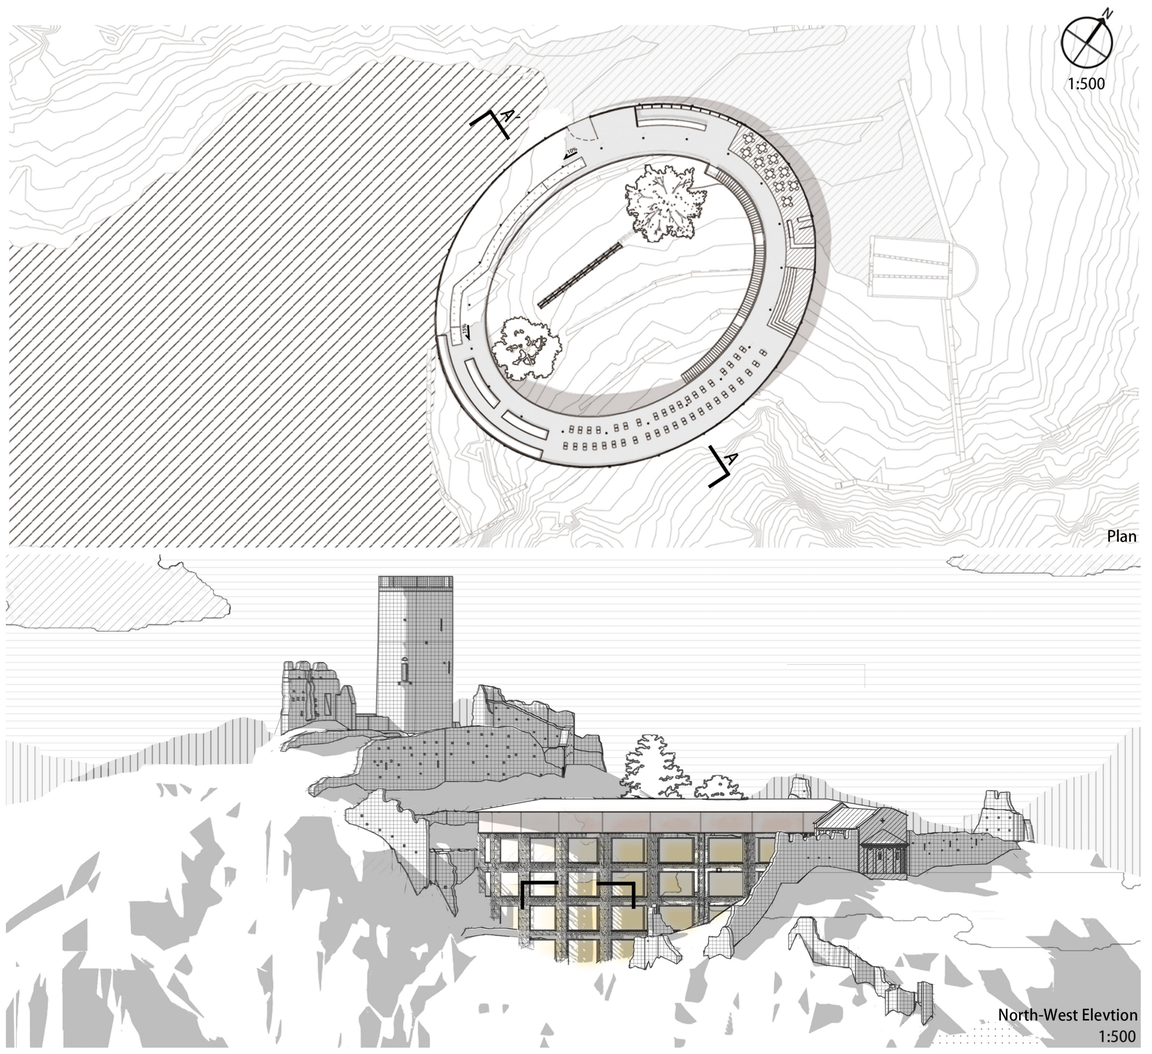


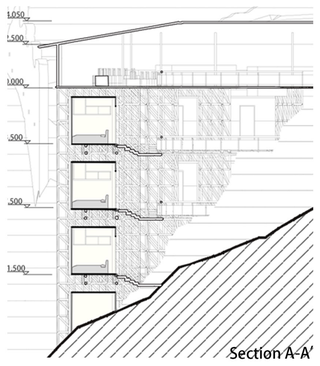
2.Thinking

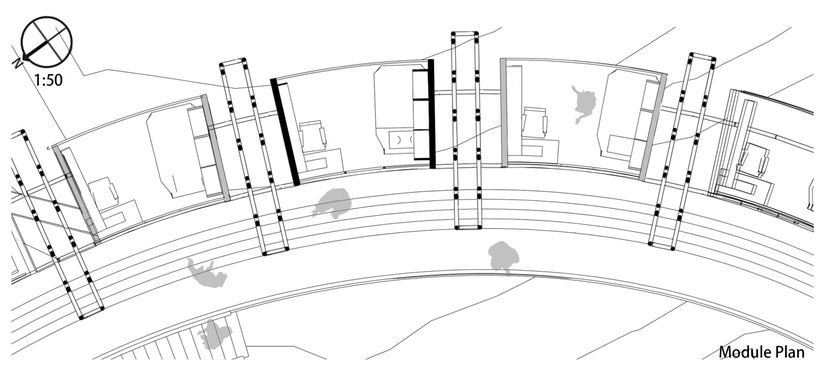
Our concept is to preserve the Chatel-Argent Castle without alterations, maintaining its unique connection with visitors. We aim to construct a substantial, pure building within the rocky region, creating a bridge-like corridor that engages with the ruins and introduces a theatrical atmosphere. The steel-framed building will offer a sense of lightness, with modular housing appearing to float against the rock face, providing a magnificent valley view.

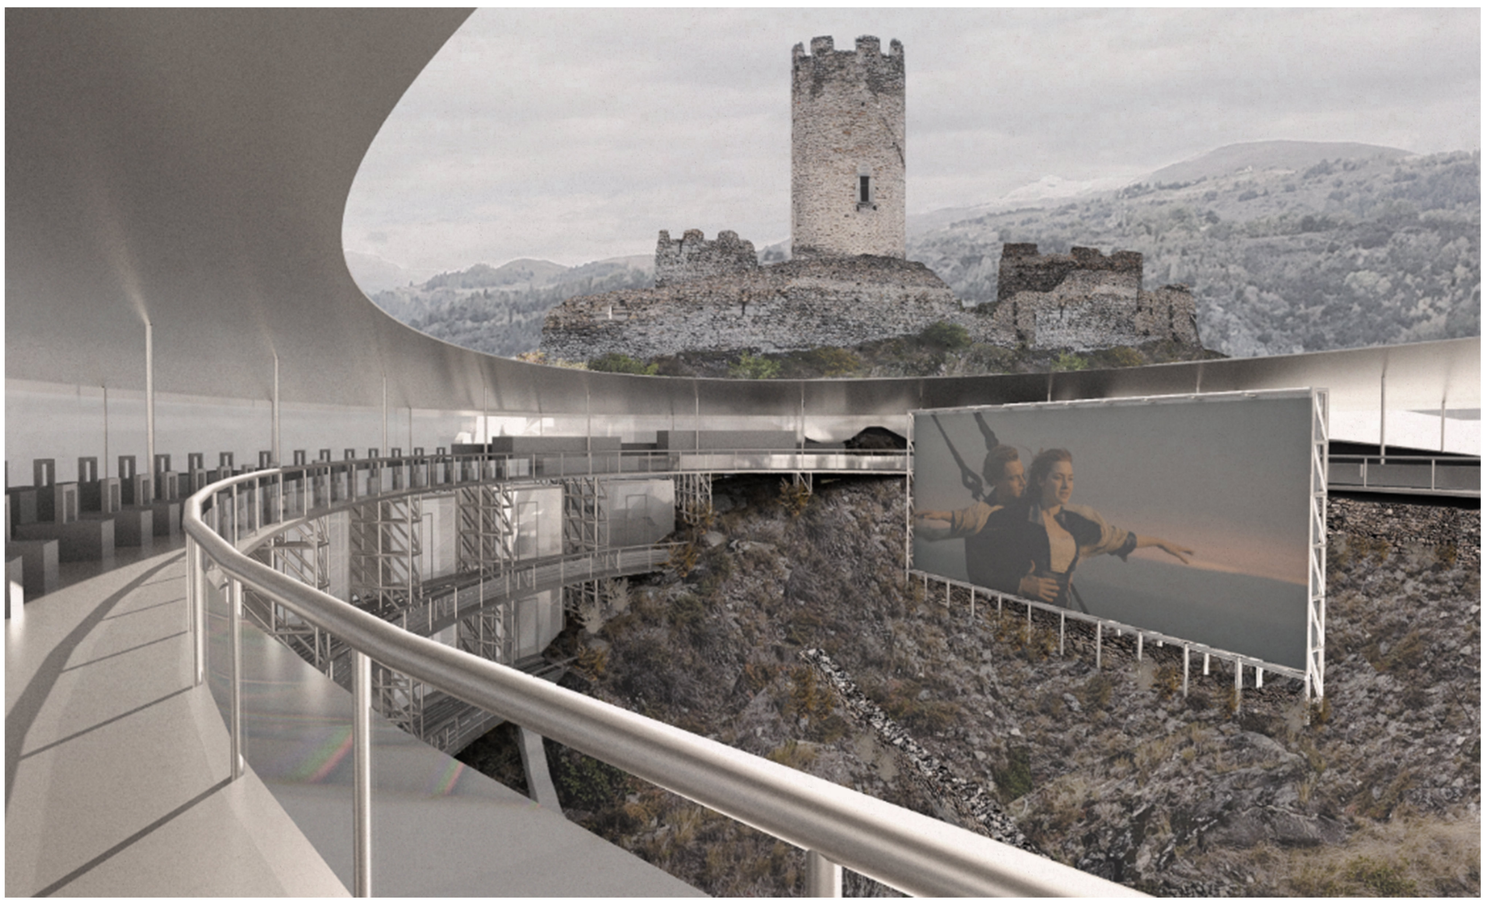
3. Architectural Logic

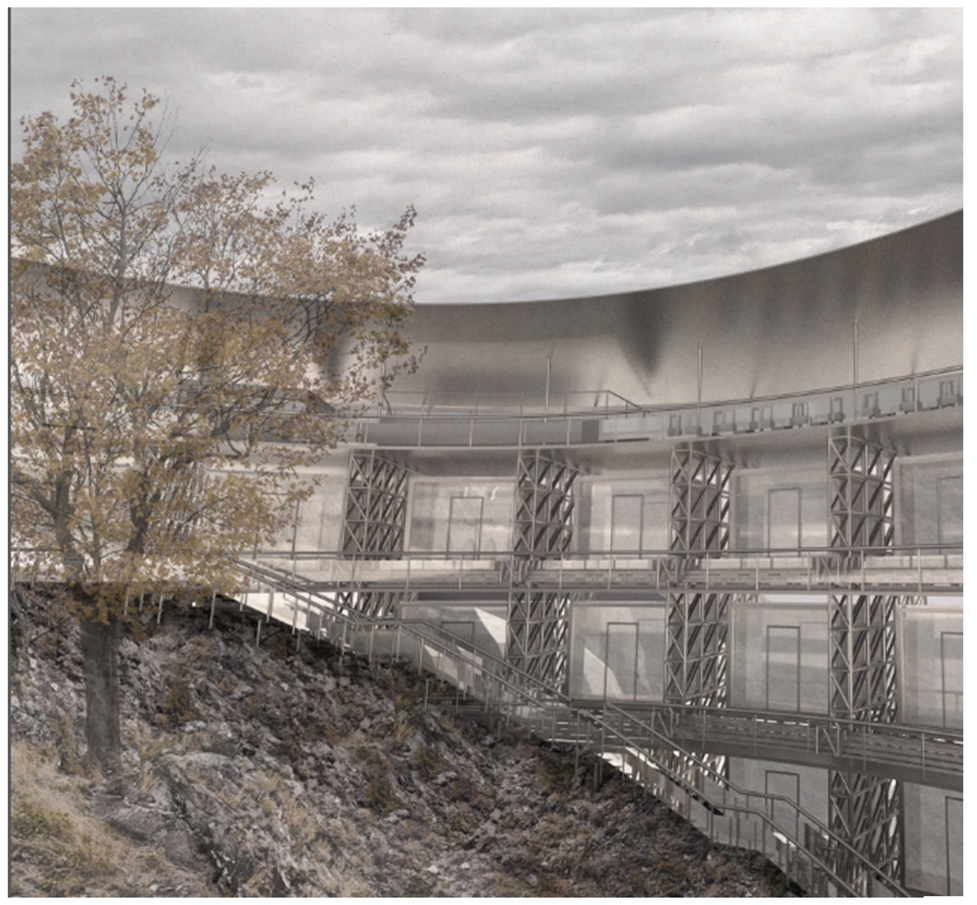
The building will have upper levels for public and exhibition spaces and lower levels for residential use. Each modular residence will offer spaces for rest and appreciation of the surroundings. The central natural monument will serve as a focal point and movie screen. The steel frame ensures durability and lightness, while the sloped roof creates a "waterfall" effect for dramatic immersion.












Our team aims to showcase the essence of the ruins, integrating it with the building's experience to foster a connection and revitalize the Chatel-Argent Castle.
